

LAPO ELKANN AND GARAGE ITALIAN CUSTOMS

Lapo Elkann, President of Italian Independent Group - in the picture with his sister Ginevra and her husband Giovanni Gaetani dell'Aquila d'Aragona - chose a historical symbol of Milan, the former Agip petrol station in Piazzale Accursio commissioned in 1952 by Enrico Mattei to the architect Mario Bacciocchi, as the site of his new automotive project dedicated to customizing and creating 360 degrees tailor made vehicles. "A streamline building, which seems to fly over Piazzale Accursio." It has two large and disproportionate roof canopies that are not only objects to protect the area from the rain, but they are the very essence of the architecture with a strong communicative power. It is not just a simple building, it is a monument to imagination." said the architect Michele De Lucchi, who has curated the renovation project. Carlo Cracco will also open a restaurant in the space.
